WEST OUTPLAYED EAST.

More Than Two-Thirds of the Sectional Games Won by Western Lads. In the series of fifty-four games just clubs in the west the western clubs were fifty-four games. On the first trip west of the eastern clubs early in the season the west barely won a majority of the games played, the record on that trip being twenty-seven victories for the west out of fifty-one games played. The west did even better than the east in the first series of sectional games played in the first series of sectional games played in the east, the eastern clubs winning thirty-seven out of fifty-three games on their home grounds, a percentage of .608, while thirty-eight out of fifty-four games gave the west a percentage of .704. The number of games won and lost on the trip by each club, together with the percentage of games won, follows. Brooklyn, it will be seen, was the only eastern club to win a majority of their sames, and it was a narrow shave of their games, and it was a parrow shave

The rank of the clubs when they started on their trip, together with their percentages at that time, as compared with their rank and percentage when the series was finished, including the games played July 13, is here shown, and also the loss or gain in percentage:

The Phillies are falling from grace. Durng yesterday's game Flick and Slagle were about the only players that were not jeered All the western clubs are moving east to-lads continue their good work the championship contest will be exceptionally interesting.

Joe Kelley was put out of the game yesterday by Umpire Swartwood. Shortstop Dahlen took up the controversy, and as a result almost a first fight followed, the players finally interfering.

Link Lowe is sick and ex-Senator Barry is filling his place at second for Boston. Barry is not in Lowe's class as a fielder, but when it comes down to bitting Jimmy has the veteran "skinned."

The retirement of "Birley" Ewing from the New York management has certainly benefited the club. All the Giants are now playing as their reputations demand, and as a result victories are coming their way as a regular thing.

Manager Fred Clarke has apparently regained his batting eye, and is now lining them out with pleasing regularity. Up until about a week ago Clarke percentage was about 200, while he belongs in the upper tendom of the batting class.

Third Baseman Hickman of the Giants outdid himself yesterday. He had eight chances, all hard ones, and he coppered them all without a slip up. In addition, he had three hits to his credit, leading the Giants at the bat.

Buffalo has at last struck a winning combination and has been bowling the American League clubs over right down the line. Yesterday the Bisons won a twelve-inning game from Minneapolis, making the ninth straight victory to their credit. Gettman is still out of the game, but Atherton is playing finely.

The secret of Boston's slump has at last bobbed up. Fred Tenney has been hankering after leadership honors, and it was finally decided to give him the reins. Duffy's friends wouldn't have it that way, and they shot the harpoon into the ex-collegian.

to get started, but he has finally struck his stride.

If ever there was an ideal pitcher that faced a batsman it is Kid Nichols. Never abusive, seldom remonstrative, he attends strictly to his work, and pittches just as hard when losing as when winning. He wastes no time in delivering the ball, still is sufficiently deliberate to study the characteristics of the batsman. His temperate and gentlemanly habits are responsible for his long service in the eague, and today there are few pitchers who are his equal.

Cross was out in the fifth inning on a play in yesterday's Boston-Philadelphia game that perhaps no other first baseman in the league could have made except the brainy Tenney. Monte was on first and Thomas bunted to Collins, who picked the ball up with his right hand and hurled it across to Tenney while on the run. The ball beat the runner by about a foot. Quicker than the crowd could realize it Tenney had snapped it to Long, who tagged Cross before he could get back to the bag, he having overrun it on the play.

Even the brainy ball players are caught up on tricks once in a while. McGraw fell a victim to a little scheme which Corcoran, Peitz and Hahn worked in Sunday's game at Cincinnati. With McGraw and Burkett on second and first, respectively, it was evident that they would attempt a double steal. Just about the time that McGraw had taken a good lead off second Corcoran slipped over to second base. The instant he reached there Hahn turned and threw the ball to him. McGraw made a desperate slide back to the bag, but he was caught three feet. Had some player who has not the reputation of being brainy been caught in that way, he would have been referred to as a dub or some other choice name would have been applied.

Judging from the following Charley Dryden of the North American has tired of making excuses for the shortcomings of the Quakers:

"One Noodles' Hahn mopped us up without hit or run. Holy smoke! He should have pitched the cushions.

"For seventeeen days now I've been grinding out a more or les the level, I'd rather be a bishop or get another job turning music at the piano for a young lady than shoot the chutes with a weak-kneed ball team. Thank goodweak-kneed ball team. Thank good-ness, we have but one more fit to throw, and then we'll get our medicine. Strawber-ry Bill Bernhard was on the slab again.

rour straight at Chicago and a like number here. Harpoon No. 13. Dive, colonel, dive!"

Roy Thomas must be the most aggravating batsman in the league for a pitcher. He never comes to the plate that he does not make anywhere from five to fifteen fouls. Some purposely and some accidentally, but most of them are made purposely. He has the art of fouling them off down better than any player in the league. Even the great McGraw can take lessons from Thomas in this respect. You never see him walk up to the plate without staying there at least two or three minutes. He may not wind up the season with a large batting average, but he is a valuable man to head the batting list, for he reaches first about as often as any man in the league.

Of the crew itself, Lunsford, who was regarded as one of the best strokes on local waters, is out of town. The crew as it has been definitely decided upn for the national regatta is as follows: Young, bow; Gordon, No. 2; Mangan, No. 3; May, No. 4; Britt, No. 5; Malze, No. 6; Daly, No. 7, and Heth, No. 8. May is the new man in the crew who will take the place of Lunsford, though he does not pull stroke. The intermediate race is for a distance of a mile and a half, and the men have been working hard on a course of this length.

Owing to an unforeseen accident it was feared for a time that the Potomacs would not be represented in the regatta. Should the Potomac crew win its intermediate and show any kind of strength, it is highly probable that it will be entered in the senior race on the day following, and if the crew should win this race it is certain of the Paris trip.

There was considerable talk among the members of the club of sending the eight to the exposition to represent the club, but the project was not carried out, the expense being almost too heavy for the club to bear alone.

As the eight is now rowing it has made much progress. Ever since the opening of the local aquatic season the oarsmen have been at work, and have been under careful and hard training. The work of the crew, however, is said by those who have watched its progress to be not quite so satisfactory at last year, but it is hoped that at the time of the race it will show up in excellent form. The members will leave the city tomorrow for New York, where they will get ready for their event, spending several days in practice work over the course.

"TERRIBLE TERRY'S" FIGHT.

Erne's Seconds Throw Up the Sponge in the Third Round. Terry McGovern is the greatest fighting nachine that the world ever saw. Whatever doubt there may have been en-followed his meteoric career was dissipated last night at New York, when, in the middle of the third round of what was to have beaten Frank Erne, the lightweight champlon of the world, into insensibility. Erne was not knocked out, but he was absolutely helpless, and his seconds humanely threw up the sponge. It was one of the fastest, as it was one of the most decisive, fights ever

At Vincennes, France, Saturday "Cash" Sloane won the Prix des Tourelis, amounting to $1,000, with the Duc Grammont's Reussi. He was third in the Prix des Remparts on Baron Leonine's Bradamante. He mished second in the Prix Bastile on Duc Grammont's Baravelt. In the Des Fosses Sloane finished third on Leonine's Neptune II. himself justice because of the excessive training he had to undergo in order to reach the prescribed weight. That Erne was not so strong and so fit as he would have been had he weighed in at 133 pounds no one will doubt, but the fact remains that making all allowance for this handleap, he showed nothing to justify the belief that he could have changed the result had the conditions of the match called for catchweights.

he showed nothing to justify the belief that he could have changed the result had the conditions of the match called for catchweights.

Erne showed the effect of the course of sprouts he had to undergo to get to the weight. He was thightly drawn about the face and as he was compelled to weigh in stripped, it was evident that he had gone through a severe sweating process. This was shown in his appearance after the first round, which was about the fastest three minutes of fighting ever seen within a ring. When he walked to his corner he was breathing heavily, but there wasn't the slightest sign of perspiration about his body. The minute's rest between the first and second round, however, had a wonderfully reviving effect upon him. It was in the latter round that he made his running and raised the hopes of his friends. He used a straight left-handed punch to advantage, sending McGovern's head back repeatedly. It looked at the end of the round that Erne had finally secured McGovern's measure, and would win at his leisure. Then the fickle crowd began to say "I told you so. A good big man can always lick a good little man."

Whether Erne's revival in the second round was only a flash in the pan or whether McGovern was playing foxy is a matter of opinion. Erne certainly had all the better of the exchanging, while "Terrible Terry's" efforts were mild affairs compared with his vigorous onslaught in the opening chapter. But there was no questioning about the relative ability of the two boys after the third round once got fully under way. They had hardly put up their hands before it was made manifest that Erne was due to receive McCormick's end of the purse. Erne's straight left-hand jabs, which had been so effective in the second round, were notably absent.

Whether Erne purposely changed his tactics with the hope of getting in a swinging right hander that would settle McGovern for good and all is known only to himself. But whatever chance he had to prolong the fight was lost by his change of tactics. He made a wild swin ing that he was a beaten man, threw up the sponge.

It was undoubtedly one of the fastest milling affairs ever pulled off. As soon as the gong sounded in the first round McGovern started to rush Erne. The latter got there first, however, with a straight left. This nettled the little fellow, whose arms worked like piston rods around Erne's body. The latter certainly looked to be in trouble until the round was about half over, when he caught McGovern off his balance and dropped him with a short right-hand swing. It wasn't much of a punch, but just the dropped him with a short right-hand swing. It wasn't much of a punch, but just the same Terry took the clock. They went to a clinch as soon as they resumed hostilities, and looking over Erne's shoulders McGovern winked at some of his friends around the ring, and it was not a property smile at that. Just before the round ended he landed a terrific right on the kidneys, which had a most damaging effect upon the Buffalo boy. Then came the finish. McGovern received $19,000 and Erne $6,000. Twelve thousand persons saw the mill.

The opening race meet Saturday will be a mile for local amateurs, though as the season has passed so far without any races the local riders will be somewhat lacking in speed, it is thought. There will be a mile open, in which the crack professionals of the country will participate, and a two-mile handicap for the same riders. An extra attraction on the program will be a match race, probably between Tom Cooper, formerly champion of the country, and Kraemer, ex-champion of amateurs, the latter defeating Cooper recently up north. If these two are not selected for the match race some other riders of prominence will be brought forward. be brought forward.

Major Taylor will also be one of the attractions. He is the colored rider who was in the city last season and whose speed occasioned considerable comment. He was barred out of the racing men's union, but was recently reintrated.
